

I'm honestly not sure exactly how I am supposed to write this, but I'll do my best. I went to the airl website this morning and I saw an add saying that the FCC was possibly going to put into action something that would replace my airl station with another program. They asked that the listeners write to you. I don't know what I am supposed to say, but I will say this:

Airl is a huge part of my life. I have recently been separated permanently from my fiance, I am being persecuted because I am graduating early in a small school and not everyone likes the idea, and my family life is very trying. My life is a huge storm and has been for a few months now. I use Airl to just lay back and relax and let God pour over me. The music played is more therapeutic to me than any best friend or counselor could be. I've relied on the station for the spiritual balm for my recent wounds and trials. Please, I beg you not to take it off air. There are only two stations in Texas, and I am close to one of the two. I was devastated to find there were so few, and I hoped one day there would be more to minister to teenagers and hurting hearts like myself one day. It would be a tragedy if Airl was replaced by another station. Please reconsider this plan.
